THE OLD SAYRE HOUSE.

INTRODUCTION.

The period at which this town was settled is famous in the History of England. The Revolution had already begun that was destined to shake the throne of a thousand years, and by overthrowing the superstitious veneration that ascribed to royalty a divine right to rule, prepared the way for a higher degree of constitutional liberty ; the storm was gathering that was soon to burst upon the head of the monarch who had labored to destroy the rights of his people, and although his execution was a shock to the prejudices of the age and in the end proved a blow to the cause of freedom, yet from that day to the present the liberties of England have been based upon surer guarantees and supported by firmer pledges, than her rulers ever gave when their power was weak and broke when their hands were strong.

Yet it is admitted that the Revolution of 1640 was not caused by any physical sufferings endured by the people ; the general condition of the laboring classes in England at that time was far superior to that of the same class in other lands ; the question of right for which Hampden fought and fell was one that affected only the moral sense of the nation, and was so little connected with physical evils that one of the greatest of English statesmen has not hesitated to declare that the whole cause of the war was that the “imagination of the nation rose against the government.” Philosophers of this class will see little excuse for the heroic struggles of Puritan and Huguenot ; a little sacrifice of conscience, a little yielding to the powers that be, would have enabled them to live a quiet life and die a peaceful death ; but he has studied the records of the past to little purpose, who has not seen that the noblest pages of human history tell the story of men who died when they might have lived, and suffered when they might have rejoiced.

The troubled condition of the old country was the principal cause of the settlement of the new world. Safe in their home in the wilderness, the war that swept the length and breadth of their native land, was known to the self-exiled band only by rumors that were few and far between; it was to them what the roar of the wintry wind is to one seated by a happy fireside, and the overthrow of one government and the setting up of another no more disturbed their quiet repose, than the storm that rages on the ocean without can destroy the tranquility of the sheltered harbor.

We will not attempt to recount the story of the founding of our native town; the work has been done by abler hands than ours; but it is our task in transcribing these records of the past, to rescue from destruction the little that remains of what is fast becoming an age of fable. That nations whose beginning is lost in the mist of ages should ascribe to their founders a supernatural origin and superhuman powers, cannot excite our surprise, when we find the descendants of our first settlers firm in the belief that their ancestors were endued with greater powers of body, a higher degree of health, and longer lives, than are granted to men of the present day. A careful perusal of these records will expose the fallacy of that blind worship of the past, so ably rebuked in Sacred Writ by the wisest of men, and show clearly that many an admirer of the good old times, if they should return, would find himself much the worse off for their coming.

When the first settlers arrived they found the island inhabited by a race whose origin is wrapped in utter obscurity. From the little that is found in these records concerning them, it appears that the whole extent of what is now the town of Southampton was owned by the Shinnecoçk tribe of Indians, who were divided into many small bands, and were living in villages that were without exception situated near the different creeks or branches of the bays, forming so important a part of the geography of the town. Their nature and habits rendered it impossible for them to live in large communities, and although their traditions speak of their once being as numerous as the leaves of the forest, yet it is exceedingly doubtful if the tribe in its best days ever numbered two hundred fighting men. Their hardihood, bravery, and powers of endurance, in short, all the good qualities that they possessed, have been magnified to the utmost extent by the writers of romance, and it is a popular belief that they were free from most of the physical ills that shorten the life and embitter the existence of civilized men. Yet a little thought will at once dispel this illusion. Utter ignorance of medical knowledge, homes that at the best were but a poor protection from the elements, food of an inferior quality, badly cooked, often in insufficient quantities, and too frequently a total deprivation of it, these must have had the same effect then that they would have now. That they were hardy none can deny, for none but robust constitutions could endure their manner of life, but that they possessed any natural superiority of mind or body, or enjoyed any immunity from disease, may be believed by the novelist, but is not to be credited by the philosopher or historian.

Although the land was honorably purchased of its aboriginal owners, yet the settlers never saw a moment's rest for fear of their dreaded neighbors. In the field a guard was kept; at night none knew at what hour the alarm would sound; to meeting on the Lord's day they went as men prepared for instant war; every male from sixteen years of age to sixty was a soldier enrolled in the ranks; and in proportion to its population the town could boast of a larger standing army, armed and equipped, than any nation on the surface of the globe.

Those who believe that the settlement was formed entirely of God fearing and virtuous men, will find in these pages much that will fail to support their views. When we see that it was found necessary to build a prison at a very early date; when the stocks and whipping post occupied a prominent position in our village, and, to judge from the records, neither suffered from want of use; when petty law suits were far more frequent than at present; when we find stringent laws passed against lying, drunkenness and kindred crimes, the question naturally arises: when was this age of purity that people boast of? The truth is that while there was here one class that may have been sufferers for conscience sake, and men of whom the world was not worthy, there were also among them those who came to this country simply to better their condition, and others still who evidently belonged to those who "leave their country for their country's good." But we think no unprejudiced mind can read these records without being convinced that the bone and sinew of the new settlement were men who, from their sound judgment and constant appreciation of the duties they owed to God and man, are worthy of all the respect and admiration that posterity can bestow.

At the very first stage of the enterprise our fathers saw the need of established law. Magistrates were elected (generally three in number) who were looked upon with a degree of veneration that the modern occupants of the office can scarcely hope to obtain. The entry on page 24 will show the origin of the various courts whose actions form so large a part of the present volume. The Justices held their ordinary courts very much as they are held at the present time, but all affairs of any consequence to the town in general were decided at the Quarter Courts, and in almost every case where the General Court is referred to, the Quarter Courts are meant. These were composed of the freemen of the town, and all of them were duly notified to attend; the Magistrates presided, witnesses were examined, the case fully discussed, and the question decided by a plurality of voices; those who failed to attend were fined, and all present were required to vote.

And in connection with this, one peculiarity of our ancestors may deserve a passing notice; the high value they placed on office and its honors. If a man was so fortunate as to become a Justice of the Peace or a Captain in the Militia Company, he was sure to make use of the title upon all possible occasions while living, and it would be placed with pious care upon his tomb-stone after he was done with this world and its glories. It would seem like one of the strange inconsistencies of human nature, that a class of men who are supposed to be dead to worldly fame and careless of earthly greatness, should be almost infatuated after such little titles as Mr., Captain, and Esquire.

A little thought, however, will perhaps explain the discrepancy. Love of power may be considered one of the inherent qualities of human nature, and, in their own country, the men whose labors are here recorded, were of a class who could never expect to be known to fame, or attain to dignity. Stars and orders were not for them, the insignia of nobility were far beyond their reach, and men can easily affect to despise what they can never hope to possess. But in the land of his adoption, a change awaited him. The man who in his native land was looked upon as a schismatic by the church and a revolutionist by the state, suddenly found himself transformed into a peer of a new realm, one of the inhabitants of a social world so small that his presence or absence was a thing of the utmost importance to the rest of the body politic; the highest offices of the little Commonwealth were within his reach. To be a magistrate of the infant colony was relatively as high as the loftiest judicial position in the gift of the English crown; and the Captaincy of its little band of soldiers, was a post as important as a Major Generalship in the British army.

As the town was founded by men who had suffered from religious persecution, it may readily be supposed that the formation of a church would be one of the first things to which they would turn. To erect a house for worship seems to have been one of the first public labors undertaken by the community. The peculiarities of Puritan belief and practice have furnished an inexhaustible theme for the pen of the essayist and historian, and certainly no class of men ever lived whose thoughts and acts were more influenced by considerations connected with the eternal world. In such a state of society the preacher of the Gospel would naturally hold a very important position, but his social influence was based upon the fact that he was the only educated person in the community. In a place where only one man can read and write, that man is an oracle, but where all can boast of these accomplishments no one can claim any precedence from the possession of them. Any boy who now attends an Academy with any desire to learn, can obtain without leaving his native town, an education that the graduates of Cambridge or Yale could not gain at the time those institutions were founded. The worst enemies of Puritanism cannot deny that the ministers of the new Colonies were men of blameless life and good ability, and though in some cases their minds were clouded by the prejudices and bigotry of the age, they strove by every action "to point to brighter worlds and lead the way." It is pleasant to be able to record the fact, that while the history of many towns on Long Island show instances of religious persecution, especially in the case of the Quakers, the records of this town are nowhere stained with blood. The curious code of laws found on page 18 of this book were never enforced to their full extent. The original is supposed to be in the hand writing of Abraham Pierson, the first minister, and bears internal evidence of having been written at the earliest period of the settlement, but the settlers of the new world soon found it necessary to enact laws more adapted to the circumstances of the community, and thus originated the sarcasm so frequently heard that the Puritans agreed to be "governed by the laws of God until they had time to make better."

The town at an early date resolved that none should be permitted to settle here who were not acceptable to a majority of the inhabitants. This doubtless prevented many from becoming residents, who, had they settled here, would have been liable to persecution for their religious views. To suppose that the founders of this town were at all in advance of their age, and too enlightened to entertain the thought of controlling the religious views of their neighbors, may be believed by their descendants but is not supported by facts. Civil and religious liberty has been a thing of slow growth, and we ought not to be surprised that a darker age, and a more ignorant community, should have thought the jail and the whipping post were the proper place for Quakers, and that the best way to stop a heretic's tongue was to put a hole through it with a hot iron.

The history of the world shows that extremes both of thought and action follow each other, thought and speech are now untrammelled, and sentiments can be freely expressed, that would once have insured a violent death to the one who uttered them.

The belief of our ancestors was the strictest Calvinism, and this creed is still the faith of most of their descendants. That all things that are were fore-ordained from the beginning of the world, and that every act of man was a link in an endless chain planned by Eternal Wisdom, was something that to them admitted of no doubt. Their belief in the divinity of our Lord was not to be shaken. To them Christ was something more than "the best of all good men," something more than a teacher sent from God, something more than an impostor who betrayed the confidence and worked upon the credulity of his followers. He was to them the Son of God, born in the likeness of his Father's glory, and we may readily suppose that they would have no sympathy or charity for the modern so-called "Liberal Christianity" that considers Paul and Plato, Christ and Socrates, Peter and Andrew Jackson Davis, equally divine and equally entitled to reverence.

But in one respect there has been such a remarkable change in the manner of presenting Bible doctrines, that we cannot forbear to notice it at length. No one who is at all acquainted with the sermons of that period can fail to observe the stress that is laid upon the two doctrines of the Resurrection and the day of Judgment. The time and talent spent in the attempt to reconcile the doctrines of Election and free will, was more than equalled by that employed to find the time of the coming of the Son of Man, and in expatiating upon the events of the last great day. The darker parts of Scripture, the prophecies of the Apocalypse and Daniel, were searched, not only with that eager curiosity that has in all ages prompted men to endeavor to lift the veil that hides the future, that caused the ancients to resort to oracles, and induces some in modern times to put faith in "spirit rappings," but with the spirit that actuates men in whose minds hope and expectation hold equal sway, and as men are generally inclined to believe what they wish to be true, it seems to have been the common belief that the time was nigh at hand.

The reason for this may be found in the entirely different circumstances surrounding the two classes of men. Compared with the past, the present is emphatically an age of ease and luxury, and men who have their good things in this life, and whose every wish is gratified as soon as it is expressed, can hardly be expected to have any very ardent longings for the coming of the Judgment Day, or to dwell with much delight upon its certainty. With our ancestors, the case was vastly different. The Puritan wished for nothing better than to stand before an impartial Judge, and meet as his accusers the bigoted James and Charles, and the profligate Rochester and Buckingham. It was an ordeal they had no reason to dread, a contest in which they were sure to come off victorious. They could hope for mercy from God, who never received it from man, and there was justice in Heaven's tribunal for those who failed to find it in earthly courts.

The question of Proprietor rights is one that has been a fruitful source of contention and the cause of expensive law suits. The publication of these records will throw much light upon this vexed subject. We learn from them that all the territory east of Canoe Place and west of a "place or plain called Wainscott," was sold to the persons named in the Indian deed, for a consideration duly paid. This tract was therefore owned by them as undivided property, and the share that each possessed was in proportion to the amount paid by him. If a person who was acceptable to a majority of the inhabitants wished to settle in the town, a home lot and farm was frequently granted to him, generally, however, with the condition that he was to remain and improve the same for a term of years. Persons who understood useful trades were thus encouraged to become members of the new settlement, and in many instances a share in the undivided property, or, as it was called, "a right of commonage," was granted to them. All that was not actually disposed of in this manner was justly supposed to belong to the original purchasers and their heirs. As a few pounds were sufficient at that time to buy a "right," almost every one who came to settle in the place availed himself of the privilege, and so the proprietors and the townsmen were almost identical; still it was well understood that none had any claim to the public lands who had not purchased a share in them. A list of the proprietors with the amount of their respective rights, was carefully kept; and when from time to time large tracts of lands were divided, each tract was carefully surveyed and divided into as many lots as there were 150 pound allotments in the town,* the proprietors were duly notified of the completion of the work and warned to be present at the time of drawing, and on the day appointed each drew his share by lot. The number of allotments was 41, and the whole number of proprietors 47.

Although the number of allotments was never increased to any great extent, yet from various causes the number of proprietors in course of time became very great, some of them owning but a small fraction of a share; still their right was fully recognized, and it was not until they began to lay claim to all lands under water, and attempted to control the fishing privileges, that any serious controversy arose between them and the town at large. At length, by carrying their claims to the farthest extent allowed by theory, they prejudiced even their just rights, and in 1818 the word Proprietor was another name for grasping, unscrupulous avarice.

As the undivided lands diminished in quantity, the value of a share became less, and at the present time a proprietor right, once so important, is little more than a name.

We have reason to believe that a school was established in Southampton at a very early date. The records to the year 1655 are in the hand writing of Richard Mills, who styles himself "school master," and probably acted in that capacity from the time of the settlement. What at that time was called a school, can hardly be compared with the institutions of the present day; the branches taught were few in number, and the instruction exceedingly limited. Almost all required of the school master was that he should be a fair penman, and possess a tolerable knowledge of Arithmetic. Geography, Grammar and other branches now considered essential were not taught at all, books were not easily obtained, and the instruction was mostly oral. To read and write and learn the fundamental rules of arithmetic was all that was considered necessary, and the "Rule of three" was to most of the scholars the boundary of mathematical knowledge.

The master himself held a high position in the town from his superior knowledge. His narrow income was often increased by small sums received for writing deeds and other legal documents. A sick man would send for him to make his will, and he would be called upon by town officers to assist in adjusting town accounts. If he could sing, his fortune was made, and he would always be a welcome addition to all social gatherings.

Witchcraft, that caused so much alarm in New England, was the source of one of the most painful episodes in American history, never seems to have disturbed the quiet of the town ; the only reference to it is found in 1667 when a person is persecuted for slander in asserting that a certain woman had bewitched him ; it seems to have excited little attention, but it is to be feared that nothing was wanting but favorable circumstances to cause such scenes as made Salem so notorious in history. The belief in Witchcraft may have been absurd, but it was certainly universal ; the dread of its influence may have been groundless, but it was certainly unfeigned ; men can hardly be blamed for taking such precautions for their safety as the united voice of the age considers necessary, and our ignorant ancestors may be pardoned for believing what the greatest of British jurists never ventured to doubt.

With the year 1660 the era of the settlement may be said to end ; the new enterprise was no longer an experiment, but established upon a firm and sure foundation. The Indian tribes, that had been a source of constant alarm, were no longer regarded with that dread that made every house a castle, and every man a soldier. The brief period of Dutch government only bound them faster to the mother country to which they were united by the ties of blood. The day of their probation was ended, and it will be well for ourselves and those who may come after us if, in the hour of peril, Heaven shall grant us hearts as bold and hands as strong as those with which the fathers met all the storms of fate.

And it is a feeling of profound respect for the memory of the Puritans, deep appreciation of their labor in behalf of human freedom, veneration for those institutions that are the blessing of the earth as it is and the glory of the world as it is to be, that has prompted one who is of a different race, and can claim no kindred with the names that are written in this book, to collect with jealous care the fragments that time has spared, and preserve this history.

The editor wishes to express his obligations to the Rev. G. R. Howell for much valuable assistance in preparing this work for the press.

NOTES TO THE "DISPOSALL OF THE VESSELL."

PREPARED BY REV. G. R. HOWELL.

1. Edward Howell came from Marsh Gibbon, in the hundred and shire of Buckingham, Eng., where in 1639 he sold the Manor of Wesbury which he held in fee by inheritance, this manor was bought by William Howell in 1536 of Robert Dormer who had it from the company of Cooks of London to whom Edward I demised it, to William who died Nov. 30, 1557, succeeded his eldest son John who died without issue in 1576, and the manor then passed into the hands of the second son Henry. From him it came to another Henry (son of the last named) who in 1606 pays 20£ to the sheriff of Bucks Co. on a loan to England. Edward the Southampton colonist inherited the estate from the second Henry (who appears to have been his father according to Lipscomb's Buckinghamshire). For a geneology of his descendants see Howell's history of Southampton.

2. Daniel How. He was one of the most influential pioneers of the settlement, and a magistrate probably as long as he was a member of the colony. He was made freeman at Lynn 1534, and Lieut. in the Ancient Artillery Co. 1638, resided in Southampton up to Oct. 1643, but was one of the founders of East Hampton in 1648, where he probably removed in 1649. Had brother Edward and son Ephraim.

3. Edward Farrington æ 47, came from Olney, Co. of Bucks, with wife Elisebeth and 4 children in 1635, (died 1671,) his wife Elisebeth was b. 1586 and children Sarah b. 1621, Martha b. 1623, John b. 1624, Elisebeth b. 1627, and m. John Fuller 1641. Edmund, Thomas, John and Edward are found on the early papers, but no evidence of actual residence here, except Thomas and Edward, both of whom are on the list of 1645, but not of that of 1644. Edward was here apparently in 1657, the family returned to Mass.

4. Allen Bread. Although he is named in the Indian deed, Dec. 13, 1640, it is doubtful if he remained here through the first year, he was of Lynn in 1630 and returned to Mass. 1641.

5. Wm. Harker returned to Lynn, had w. Elisebeth who died May 21, 1661.

6. George Welbee. A resident of Lynn in 1638, he did not remain in Southampton probably after the first year.

7. Edmund Needham did not remain long, as no land appears to be recorded to him. He died at Lynn 1677, leaving children.

8. Henry Walton removed in the first or second year of the settlement, probably to Boston where a Henry W. lived many years at this period. [His name occurs in the Indian Deed, but not after. W. S. P.]

9. Thomas Newell or Newhall probably never came to Southampton. Resided at Lynn where he left descendants.

10. Philip Kirtland came quite early to Lynn, had 2 sons Philip æ 21, Nathaniel æ 19 (1635) came from Co. of Bucks, En. to Lynn, in the Hopewell 1635. He had another son John, b. about 1617, they probably returned to Mass. before 1644.

11. Thom. Terry he probably removed to Southold where the name is common and has been since the settlement.

JAMES FARRETT'S PATENT.

Know all men whom this present writing may concerne, thatt I James Farrett, of Long Island, Gent., Deputy to the Right honorable the Earle of Sterling, Secretary for the Kingdom of Scotland, doe by these presents, in the name and behalfe of the said earle, and in mine owne name, as his Deputy, as it doth or may in any way concerne myself, Give and Grant free leave and liberty to Danyell How, Job Sayre, George Wilbe and William Harker, together with their associates to sitt downe vpon Long Island aforesaid, there to possess, Improve and enjoy Eight miles square of land, or so much as shall containe the said quantity nott only vpland but alsoe what soeuer meadow marrsh ground, Harbors, Rivers, and Creeks lye within the bounds or limitts of the said Eight miles, the same and every part thereof quietly and peacebly to enjoy to them and their heires forever without any disturbance, lett or molestation from the said Earle or any by his appoyntment or procurement for him or any of his, and that they are to take their choyce to sitt downe vpon as best suiteth them. And alsoe that they and their Associates shall enjoy as full and free liberty in all matters that doe or may concerne them or theirs or that may conduce to the good and comfort of them and theirs both in church order and civell Government, together with all the easements, conveniences and accomodations what soeuer which the said place doth or may afforde answerable to wt other Plantations enjoy in Massachusetts Bay. Butt in as much as itt hath pleased our Royall King to give and grant the Patente of Long Island to the aforesaid Earle. In consideration thereof it is agreed upon that the trade with the Indians shall remain to the said Earle of Sterling to dispose of from time to time and at all times as best liketh him. Onely the aforesaid Daniel How and his copartners shall have liberty to make choyce of one man amongst them that shall freely trade with the Indians in their behalfe for any victuals within their owne plantation, but not for wampam. And if any of the aforesaid persons or any for them shall secretly trade with the Indians for Wampam, whether directly or indirectly with out leave or license from the said Earle or his assigns, the person or persons soe offending shall pay for every fathom so traded, to the said Earle or his assigns the sum of twenty shillings. further itt is Agreed upon that what soeuer shall be thought meet by the Right Worshipful John Winthrop Esq, Governor of the Massachusetts Bay, to be given to the Earle of Sterling in way of aeknowledgement, as the Pattenttee of the place, shall be duly and truly payed, and further more it is agreede upon that noe man shall by vertue of any gift or purchase, lay any claim to any land lyeing within the compass of the eight miles before mentioned, but only the aforesaid Inhabitants shall make purchase in their own names and at their own leisure from any Indians that Inhabit or have lawful right to any of the aforesaid land or any part thereof and thereby assume itt to them selves and their heirs as their Inheritance for ever. In witness whereof we have herevnto sett our hands and seals the 17th day of Aprill, 1640.

Memorandum, that the true meaning of Mr. Farrett is that, whereas hee hath formerly purchased certain lands in Long Island for the Earle of Sterling or him selfe, that he doth by these presents fully release all claime and Interest in the land above mentioned or persons that shall sitt down upon it with all title to government whether in church or Common wealth all which is to bee clearly and fully drawne up accordinge to the true meaning of this agreement when things shall be settled and concluded by the Right honourable John Winthrop above mentioned.

I Winthrop within named having seariously considered of that which in this writing is referred to my determination, although I am very unwilling to take it vpon me & as unfit also the rather being to seeke of any rule or approued precedent to guide me herein, yet being called hereunto I shall express what I conceive to be equall vpon the considerations here ensuing, viz, the land within granted being a meere wilderness and the natiues of the place pretending some Interest which the planters must purchase and they might haue had land enough gratis (and as convenient) in the massachusets or other of the collonies with liberty to trade with the Indians (which they are debared from) and for that they had possessed and improved this place before any actual claim made thereto by the Right honbbl. the Earle of Sterlinge, or had any neede of his lordships patent, and whereas his lordship (vpon consideration I suppose of the premises) required nothing of them but in way of acknowledgement of his interest, I doe here vpon conceive and doe accordingly, (so farr as power is given me) order and sitt downe that the Inhabitants of the tract of land within mentioned or the plantation now called Southampton, vpon Long Island, and their successors forever shall pay yearly to the said Earle of Sterling his heirs or assignes vpon the last day of 7 ber, att Southampton aforesaid foure bushells of the best Indian Corne their growing, or the value of so much in full satisfaction of all rents and services (the 5th part of gold and silver oare to the kings majesty reserved always excepted.) In testimony where of I have hereunto sett my hand, dated 20 (S) 1641.

(The above Confirmations are written upon the back of the Indian deed).

When the town Records came into my hands in 1862, it was the common belief that the earliest records were lost, but upon a careful examination two rolls of papers were found which proved to be the leaves of a book. These I arranged in chronological order, (as the pages were not numbered,) and as the accounts of town meetings of each year from 1641 were found, it is to be supposed that comparatively little has been lost; the volume thus made was strongly bound and carefully indexed, and if not destroyed by accident may last for generations to come.

This volume is now printed, and no pains have been spared to make an exact copy of the original, and nothing has been omitted. The records to 1651 are in the handwriting of Richard Mills, who seems to have acted as school master in the town from the settlement, though his name does not occur previous to 1650. In 1651 he sold his home lot to John Cooper, Jr., and removed from the town (his house lot is probably the one now occupied by the Presbyterian parsonage). He was town clerk in Westchester in 1661. Schoolmaster in Middleburg 1657-1660. (See O'Callaghan's Dutch Records, 107, 120, 132).

The laws founded upon the Mosaic Code found on pages 3-8 (of the original book) are supposed to be in the handwriting of Abraham Pierson, first minister of the town.

It is perhaps unnecessary to add that until 1757 the year was considered as beginning on the 25th day of March, and that month is always mentioned as being the first of the year.

The word "page" and the number at the commencement of paragraphs denote the pages of the original volume of town Records now in the Clerk's office.

Southampton March the 5, 1667 The depositions of Richard Woodhull aged about 60. This deponent saith that the tract of land which long agoe was by the Indians given or granted vnto this deponent and Mr William Wells of Southold, began at ye end of the westward bounds of Southold land and contained Curchauk, Mattatuck, Accabouk, and thence to Peaconnet River, And further saith that the deed which the Indians signed in contents were according to ye premises, Allsoe saith that within a while after the said gifts or grant this deponent heard that Mr Youngs had made purchase of a parcell of land within the compass of the said land, given as aforesaid, and there upon this deponent sent a letter of protest against ye said purchase vnto Mr Youngs and Southold men, and after the said protest made Mr Wells and some other came to this deponent and bought of him his above said Interest.

IONAS WOOD.

Richard Howell and Ioseph Rainer aged about forty years deposed this 15th of September 1667 Saith as followeth. That vpon a time about the latter end of may, last Capt, Iohn Youngs of Southhold brought over to Southampton Thomas Stanton with some of the chiefs of Southampton Indians, meeting at the Schoolhowse, some of the chiefe of Southampton Indians, with the Sachem being there, Capt Youngs being asked the end of his comeing said, to finde out truth, viz whoe had the true right to ye land or meadow in controversy betweene the said two townes, And the debate therevpon grew on betweene the Indians, then being present some of the Southhold Inhabitants, with divers of ye chiefe of the inhabitants of Southampton, Thomas Stanton being ye interpreter. These deponents heard the said Thomas ask both parties of ye Indians whoe had the true right to the said land & meadow. And the said Indians (after long debate) Ioyntly answered, that ye young eagles that were taken in the nests, and the deere that were drowned or killed in the water, It was ye Indians customs to carry ye said eagles & the skins of the Deere to those Sachems or Indians that were the true owners of ye land, thereupon Thomas Stanton presently replied saying, indeed the eagles & the deere were something, but if there were a beare killed or drowned, that would put the matter out of controversie, And the deponent heard Southampton Indians affirme that there was a bear drowned or killed in ye same tract of land now in controversie between ye the said Townes, then Thomas Stanton asked to whom the skin was carried, and Southampton Indians answered To Shinecock Indians, And Southold Indians allsoe aeknowledged that ye said beare skin was carried to Shenecock Indians by Southold Indians whoe tooke ye beare

I the subscribed namely Thomas Halsey doe witnes, that at the time of the trouble in this towne of Southampton by reason of murther committed by the Indians, At a great assembly of the Indians for the settling of matters, in fine I saw Mandush (whoe was a man reputed & acknowledged generally by all Indians in these parts to bee the great Sachems sonne of Shinecock) cutt up a turf of ground in Southampton, and delivering it to Wyandanch gave up all his right and interest unto him. And hee the said Mandush with many other of the cheifes of Shinecock Indians as ancient men, did manifest their consent and that they were contented, by their ordinary signe of stroaking Wyandanch on the back, And since that timethe said Wyandanch (whoe was Sachem of Meantauk) hath acted upon ye aforesaid Interest given to him as by letting and disposing of land at Quaquanantuck and else where And I nevr heard any deny Wyandanch his right and propriety in the premies until of late, And this I am ready to depose when there unto called,

Topping, and after some space of time that day the towne being met together with Capt, Topping the said Three men, or some of them, in the name of the others, repeated the bargain, or agreement, they had made with the Capt. but there being, or seeming to be some obstruction in the business at last it was cleared and removed, And the town with the said three men on the one part, and Capt Topping on the other, were totally and finally agreed and the agreement put to writing or record by the publique officer of the town for that purpose who did distinctly read the said agreement, unto which agreement both the town and Capt. [This is now the west part of the farm of Francis R. Bishop fronting the east side of North Sea road. The close of John Jagger, is the old Jagger homestead on the east side of North Sea road. The above is the first mention we have of it, and shows that it was owned by John Jagger before 1667. The old house was built in 1707, and was burned on the night of Feb. 18, 1891.—W. S. P.]

Tuesday laid out to Hen. Pierson on ye easte side of Littleworth Hollow, close along by the south side of the mill path,

The 50 acres of Mr. Fordham included the land east and north of this, and extended north along David White's lane, to land late owned by David Sayre, now John Scott. The 11 acre lot now owned by James Kavanagh is a part of it, and before the Revolution, was owned by Alexander Fordham, and called "Sanders' close" or Alexander's close. Thomas Burnet sold his 10 acres to John Howell in exchange for land next to the Littleworth Hollow road.—W. S. P.]

March 26, To John Davis at Towd, east line 26 poles west 56 poles. South 24, North 34 poles, all at 7 acres, the other allotted because of the beach. Nearer home against Towd 9 acres $\frac{1}{4}$, which is for 4 acres on Saggaponach Devision, 5

[This is the lot of late Capt. George G. White, next south of the Union School house in Southampton, and includes a part of the home farm of Mrs. Maria J. Howell, formerly of her father Capt.
